

Online Consumer Resources

Visit these sites to learn more about the features and benefits of products, how they work, and what others thought about them. Some sites offer price comparisons. Be aware that some sites may charge a fee for specific information or sell space to advertisers.

Can't get online? Visit your local library. Most have computers you can use for a little or no fee. You can also check with the librarian to see what current publications—such as Consumer Reports—they have available.

Consumer Reports Online offers product ratings from a respected testing company for a fee, with some free listings. Go to the public library for free report. Visit consumerreports.org.

Consumer World reviews and price comparisons. Visit consumerworld.org.

Good Housekeeping Institute tests products and offers a seal of approval, reports and videos. Visit goodhousekeeping.com/about-good-housekeeping-research-institute.

Consumer Guide provides buyer guides, reviews and “best buy” prices. Visit products.howstuffworks.com/.

Consumer Review has reviews written by users for major product categories. Visit consumerreview.com/.

Price Checker is a shopping robot that will compare prices from discount stores for you. Visit consumerworld.org/pages/price.htm

UsedPrice gives the current value of used items. Visit usedprice.com.
